WELCOME TO THE SUN GOLF GUIDE

As someone still relatively new to the Lower Mainland, I can't count the number of times I've asked for advice on where to play golf.

The listings we publish in our annual golf magazine are a great resource — telling me everything I need to know about where courses are located, how much they cost and how long they play — but I wanted a little bit more information. Our cover story this year is exactly what I was looking for, and it's sure to prove a valuable resource for other new golfers, as well as those who have lived and golfed here for years, but who want to try something new.

Golf writer Brad Ziemer approached 12 well-known members of the B.C. golf community and asked them to complete a survey that would allow us to name the best public golf course in B.C. Not surprisingly, in a province as golf-rich as ours, there was no consensus choice. Based on a points-system, however, we were able to put together a list of the top-10 courses (see story on page 5), while also assembling a list of top private courses, signature holes, hidden gems and more (see story on page 8).

Of course, the list is far from comprehensive and there are plenty of other courses worth checking out in this province. Near the top of my list is Granby River Golf Course in Grand Forks, the first full-size golf course in Canada that's completely green (see story on page 20). Owned and maintained by Philippe and Joyce Thevenaz, it's kept lush and disease free with organic fertilizer, a solution of garlic extract and rock glacial dust. It has earned praise from Golf Digest magazine, and may one day serve as a green role model for operators across the country.

If your greatest concern is how you play rather than where you play, you need look no further than page 24 for a "Little" inspiration. That's where you'll meet Jackie Little, a Port Alberni resident with five B.C. Women's Amateur titles to her credit. She won the provincial and national senior women's titles in her first year of eligibility last year, taking much of the competition by surprise. Why? Little stands just 4-foot-10, which makes the fact she hits 220 yards off the tee pretty impressive.

There are more stories in this year's magazine, including a guide to the year's local tournaments, and even more online at vancouver.sun.com/golf. There, you can try our searchable database to find a course in your neighbourhood or a city you plan to visit. The site also includes results from the tours, local golf news and tips from the pros. So until next year, happy reading, happy golfing and happy exploring to everyone.

Predator Ridge Golf Course was a close second in voting to Big Sky, thanks to its stunning views, challenging 27-hole layout and first-class practice facility.

So it probably shouldn't be a surprise that it's been named as the best public/resort course in the province by the Vancouver Sun's Best of B.C. golf panel.

What better way to tee off the golf season than with a survey that figures to fuel chatter at 19th holes across the province.

Our Best of B.C. golf panel, 12 individuals intimately familiar with this province's rich golf landscape, was formed with the hope of doing just that. We wanted to have some fun and gather opinions on the best B.C. has to offer in terms of golf. And as anyone who has spent some time on the links here knows, there is plenty to offer.

In what was a two-way race, Big Sky edged Predator Ridge in Vernon for top honours among our panelists.

Big Sky received more first-place votes (three) than any other course and was the second choice of two other panelists.

"On a sunny day, with Mount Currie in the background, the river beside it and spectacular scenery all around, Big Sky is hard to beat," said panelist James Cronk, who selected Big Sky as his top B.C. course. "It's a fantastic shot-maker's golf course that is usually in great shape."

Big Sky opened in 1994 and was designed by Americans Bob Cupp and John Fought.

General manager Chris Wallace has been there since the very beginning. He was part of the construction crew that began work on the course back in 1991 and subsequently became course superintendent.

It was Wallace and his crew that set the standard for making Big Sky what many consider to be the best-conditioned course in the province.

"That is something we have prided ourselves on and that sets us apart," Wallace says. "I do really think it's the best-conditioned course in Western Canada. There are other courses that will ramp up and be good for the summer season, good for July, good for August. We try to be perfect from the day we open the doors to the day we close. That has really helped us over the years."

But Big Sky has more going for it than its near-perfect conditioning. It's one of those rare courses that can challenge the very best players and yet also be accommodating to high-handicappers.

"I think the playability of our course is one its real strengths," Wallace says. "It truly is a good course for any handicap player. And I think that is something you don't find in many golf courses nowadays.

"A lot of courses built in the last five years are starting to be monster courses; they are focusing on lots of yardage and want a reputation for toughness. I think that's all right for your first year of opening. You may get a bit of a name, but after that I think you kind of get lost."

It is Big Sky's atmosphere that went a long way to convincing panelist Phyllis Laschuk to select Big Sky as her No. 1 choice.

"This peaceful, immaculately-maintained golf course is a diamond sur-

(Point totals in parentheses. Panelists submitted their own top-10 lists and courses received five points for a first-place vote, three points for a second-place vote, two points for a third-place vote and one point for fourth- through 10th-place votes. Ties were broken by total number of votes received by a course.)

rounded by the in-your-face Mount Currie and the organic acreages of sheep and horse farms,” Laschuk says.

Second-place finisher Predator Ridge received more votes (eight) than any other course in our survey.

Mike Carroll, the Vancouver lawyer who was one of the main organizers of the Air Canada Championship, selected Predator as his top choice.

“There really isn’t a weak hole in the entire 27-hole layout,” Carroll says. “The views are wonderful and the practice facility is first-class.”

Storey Creek, the scenic Campbell River layout ranked No. 3 by our panel, was the only other course besides Big Sky to receive multiple first-place votes (two).

“Storey Creek has it all: trees, park-like setting, a walk with nature, rolling terrain, water,” says B.C. and Canadian Senior Women’s champion Jackie Little. “It tests everything about your game. One important aspect for me when it comes to picking courses is the ability to walk. I really don’t like to ride and feel that riding should only be an option if you want, not forced upon you because of the design of the course.”

“I like Storey Creek because of its reasonable cost, welcoming atmosphere and the fact that each hole is quite separate from the others,” adds panelist Alison Murdoch, the former Canadian, British and Irish senior women’s champion.

Like most surveys, this one is not perfect. The panelists have obviously not played every course in the province. The East Kootenays is a long way from the Lower Mainland and panelist Doug Roxburgh noted that he has yet to play many of the courses in the area, including Greywolf.

The Doug Carrick mountainside layout at the Panorama Resort near Invermere was the top pick of B.C. Golf Association executive director Kris Jonasson.

“Greywolf in my opinion is the greatest mountain course in North America,” Jonasson says. “It has challenging memorable holes, fits the topography perfectly and will challenge all players regardless of the tee chosen.”

Tobiano, the new Kamloops-area course designed by Thomas McBroom, also figures to move up in the rankings in subsequent years as more players become familiar with it.

It was ranked No. 1 by Roxburgh, the 13-time B.C. Amateur champion who said simply: “Every hole is a signature hole. Great views and shot values.”

The large number of courses that received votes from our panelists is testament to the great variety of layouts in B.C. No fewer than 59 courses were included in our panelists’ top 10 lists.

Courses receiving multiple votes but unable to crack our top 10 included: Squamish Valley, Rivershore, Ledgewiew, Chateau Whistler, Bootleg Gap, Westwood Plateau, Gallagher’s Canyon, Peace Portal, University, Nanaimo, Morningstar, Swan-e-set Bay, Whistler, Eagle Ranch, Northview (Ridge), Fairview Mountain, Fairwinds, Revelstoke, Williams Lake and Fraserview.

THE BEST COURSE YOU'VE NEVER HEARD ABOUT?
B.C.'S SIGNATURE HOLE? THE TOP PRIVATE COURSE?
OUR PANELISTS WEIGHED IN ON THESE TOPICS AND MORE.

Darren Stone / Canwest News Service

A golfer tees off into clear weather at the Victoria Golf Club, which boasts one of B.C.'s signature holes, according to our panelists.

Brad Ziemer | VANCOUVER SUN

If this had been a horse race, a photo finish would have been required.

Our Best of B.C. panelists were asked to select their top three private golf courses in B.C. and it was a very close race between Shaughnessy and Capilano.

Courses received five points for a first-place vote, three for a second-place vote and one for a third-place selection. Panelists could not vote for their own club.

Shaughnessy edged Capilano by one point — 38 to 37. Marine Drive was a distant third with 12 points, while Royal Colwood in Victoria collected 11.

Capilano actually received more first-place votes (five) than Shaughnessy (four). But Shaughnessy received votes from all 12 of our panel members.

“Shaughnessy is an unbelievable players’ golf course that is very challenging and has a great design,” says panelist Craig Doell, a three-time winner of the Canadian Club Champions Championship. “You have to hit every club in the bag and work the ball both left and right. It’s one of the few courses that should hold the Canadian Open.”

Doug Roxburgh gave his first-place vote to Capilano.

“Capilano is spectacular and is my No. 1 favourite golf course,” Roxburgh says.

We asked our panelists four other questions. What follows is a summary of their responses.

QUESTION: You and some friends are planning a B.C. golf vacation during which you plan to play four or five rounds. Would your first choice be:

- a) Whistler
- b) Vancouver Island
- c) Okanagan (Kelowna, Vernon, Osoyoos)
- d) Kamloops (including Salmon Arm area)
- e) East Kootenays (Kimberley-Cranbrook area up through and including Invermere)

Not surprisingly, we got a variety of responses, but the Okanagan region was the clear winner with six first-place votes from our panelists.

"At the right time of year, the weather would be ideal and there are so many great courses to choose from," says B.C. Women's Amateur champion Kira Meixner. "After a day at the course, you can tour wineries or spend some time at the beach."

Those apres-golf activities also influenced other panelists.

"The combination of good food and great wines means that the evenings will be as enjoyable as the days," added Kris Jonasson, who also made the Okanagan his No. 1 golf holiday destination.

QUESTION: We'd like you to select what you consider to be B.C.'s signature golf hole. This should be a hole that in your view is well-designed, fun to play and is aesthetically pleasing. It should scream British Columbia as you stand on the tee. What is your choice?

Once again, there were many different choices. Furry Creek's scenic par-3 14th hole that hugs Howe Sound below the Sea-to-Sky Highway got a vote. So did Cliffhanger, Greywolf's magnificent par-3 sixth hole.

Three holes got two votes apiece from our panelists

Roxburgh and Jonasson both selected the par-4 11th hole at Golden Golf Course.

"This to me is the definition of golf in British Columbia," Jonasson says. "You stand on the tee of this downhill par 4 and you have the whole valley in front of you. The mountains rise majestically across the valley and the roar of the mountain stream to the right of the tee box is almost deafening ... It also helped that I birdied the hole when I played it."

Jackie Little and Nick Taylor both selected Capilano's dramatic par-4 sixth hole as their signature hole.

"You are surrounded by the mountains and towering trees with the Pacific Ocean staring right at you with one of the most fantastic cities in the world in the background," says Little. "This hole has it all."

Victoria Golf Club also received votes from Meixner and Doell.

"The tee is right on the ocean — take one step back and you're in the Pacific," says Doell. "On a clear day you have views of Mount Baker to the east, Mount Ranier to the southeast and the Olympic Mountain range to the south. If you're lucky, you may see a pod of killer whales swimming only a few metres from the tee.

"To top it all off, the wind can blow hard in any direction so I have to hit anywhere from a lob wedge to a five-iron to a very undulating green. Tricky but fun and it doesn't get any more scenic."

QUESTION: Name a course in B.C. that you consider to be a hidden gem. (This course could not be included in the top 10 selections by panelists).

If the responses from our panelists are any indication, B.C. has plenty of hidden gems. Our 12 panelists selected 11 different courses.

Roxburgh selected Hope Golf Club.

"A fun nine-hole course, wonderful hospitality and some challenging holes right beside the river," he says.

Little picked Castlegar Golf Club as her hidden gem: "I played it years ago and still remember it. A stunning course in a small town."

Phyllis Laschuk singled out Kelowna Golf & Country Club: "Kelowna is usually forgotten with all the new courses in the Okanagan. It is a traditional, well-designed, walkable course."

Two courses that made our top 10 list of public courses — Storey Creek and Salmon Arm — were selected as hidden gems by three of our panelists. Salmon Arm received two votes. Other courses receiving votes in this category included Creston, Balfour, Golden, Christina Lake, Peace Portal and Beach Grove.

QUESTION: Name one B.C. course you haven't yet played but hope to very soon.

We've all got courses on our list of places we must play and our panelists are no different.

Roxburgh wants to tour Dick Zokol's Sagebrush Golf Club near Merritt. Doell mentions Trickle Creek in Kimberley, while James Cronk has Greywolf on his must-play list.

Jonasson had the most unique response. He selected the ultra-private Jack Nicklaus-designed course on James Island near Victoria. That island is owned by Seattle businessman Craig McCaw.

"I'm not sure if the course has an actual name, but I have seen it from the air flying to Victoria," Jonasson says.

And that's probably as close as you are going to get to it, Kris.

Going green in Grand Forks

USING A CONCOCTION OF ORGANIC MATERIALS AND HOME REMEDIES, A HUSBAND AND WIFE TEAM HAS MADE GRANBY RIVER THE FIRST TOTALLY ORGANIC FULL-SIZED GOLF COURSE IN CANADA.

chased about 330 acres in a lush river valley near Grand Forks and opened an organic cattle ranch.

That ranch was recently converted into a challenging and scenic 18-hole course that opened for play in August 2007.

"There were no golf courses in Grand Forks and it's a perfect property," says Thevenaz. "We own 334 acres and we used about 200 acres to put in the 18 holes. It's a par 72 and we have five sets of tee boxes ranging from 5,885 yards to 7,385 yards. We ran the ranch organically and we just carried on from there with the golf course."

That means no pesticides, herbicides or fungicides. Instead, Thevenaz, who serves as course superintendent, uses a concoction of organic materials and home remedies to keep Granby River's fairways lush and its greens disease-free.

"We use organic fertilizer such as bone meal, blood meal, kelp, humate, composted turkey manure and so on," he says.

A solution of garlic extract is used to fight disease on the greens.

To help fight off grub worms, Thevenaz applies what he calls a rock glacial dust.

"We get it from Chilliwack. It's exactly the consistency of talcum powder and it literally has thousands of different minerals in it. One of them is molybdenum. Also, our greens are built on silica sand. We have a huge deposit on the ranch and worms are wounded by the sharp edges of the sand. We hardly have any bugs on our greens."

Thevenaz and his maintenance staff spend considerable time doing soil analysis to ensure the grasses — bluegrass on the fairways and bent on the greens — are healthy.

"We practise a lot of soil analysis to balance the pH level and acidity of the soil," he says.

Thevenaz says grass feeds on dead matter in the soil, called microbes, so he and his staff work to continually provide healthy material.

"We try to get enzymes into the soil and that gives us a healthier plant," he says. "When courses add chemically controlled matters, they interfere with all the enzymes in the soil. In fact, the soil will start turning sterile. Your plant is totally on welfare, relying on what you feed it ... The enzymes eat the soil and then they die and the plant eats those microbes and enzymes. So if you go organic, you encourage this balance in the soil. If you go non-organic, you sterilize your soil and then feed it just what you want."

Thevenaz doesn't believe course conditioning has suffered as a result of being totally organic.

"We were cutting our greens to three-eighths of an inch last summer and they were 10 on the Stimpmeter at the end of the season," he says. "We could go a little faster, but you put your plants in jeopardy."

In fact, when influential Golf Digest writer Ron Whitten stumbled upon Granby River during a visit to B.C. late last summer, he raved about the condition of the course in a subsequent article.

"The turf is lush and sparkling green, juxtaposed against large areas of tall, tan

Brad Ziemer | VANCOUVER SUN

Philippe Thevenaz has done to chemicals on his golf course what those of us who play the game would like to do with those dreaded double- and triple-bogeys.

He's completely eliminated them.

Granby River Golf Course in Grand Forks is entering its second full season of operation and this year, like last, there won't be a drop of chemicals used on the course. Granby River is totally organic, thanks to the dedicated efforts of Thevenaz and his wife, Joyce.

They've been going green since their days in Switzerland, when their wine vineyards were organically grown. The couple moved to Canada in 1990, pur-native grasses,” Whitten wrote. “It’s hard to believe a course can look and play this good using homemade remedies and witches’ brews. But it’s true.”

Adds Thevenaz: “The people who came from Golf Digest were literally on their knees on the fairways and couldn’t believe how lush, thick and healthy the grass was.”

Thevanez has had to convince some skeptics that he could successfully operate a totally organic course. But once his customers saw the course, they were sold on the idea.

“They absolutely just love it,” he says. “It was a little bit of a challenge because a lot of people said, ‘oh, what are you doing, you are going to have to go with real fertilizer,’ and I said, ‘no, I don’t think so.’ We convinced them and they like the idea.”

Green fees at Granby River are $40 and yearly memberships go for $850, not including a $2,000 initiation fee.

Business, while not brisk, is on the rise.

“It is a new golf course and we have to establish ourselves, but it’s growing steadily.”

Just like all that green grass on the course.

Natural wonders

Shadow Mountain, near Cranbrook, will open July 1.

THE ECONOMIC DOWNTURN DOESN'T SEEM TO HAVE HURT A PAIR OF NEW COURSES, TUCKED INTO THE MOUNTAINOUS TERRAIN OF THE GOLF-RICH EAST KOOTENAYS.

Brad Ziemer | VANCOUVER SUN

The economy has taken its toll on a number of B.C. golf projects, but a couple of them have managed to weather the storm and will open for play this season. Shadow Mountain, located just a few minutes north of Cranbrook, has set July 1 as its opening date. Black Mountain near Kelowna will welcome its first players some time in May.

Wayne Carleton is intimately familiar with both of the newest additions to the B.C. golf landscape. Carleton, the Delta resident who is part of the prolific Cooke Carleton International design team, was the lead architect on both projects.

Shadow Mountain is split in two by Highway 95A, which runs between Cranbrook and Kimberley.

"The site is quite dynamic," says Carleton, whose most recent work in B.C. was the impressive Talking Rock layout near Chase. "The west half is more mountainous terrain and the east half is more of a roly, sandy, pine-forest type of setting.

"We tried to give it a very natural character. With the abundance of sand on the site we did a lot of waste bunkering and there are some fescue areas. We tried not to move a lot of dirt. All in all, it's more of your natural, rustic and rugged type of golf course. It turned out well."

The course, which will stretch to about 7,400 yards, includes 19 holes. There's a bonus par 3 located between the 17th green and 18th tee. It serves two purposes. It gives players a bonus hole to play and it provides the course with an extra hole to use in the future when any renovation work requires a hole on the course to be closed.

The back nine at Shadow Mountain features a couple of dramatic elevation changes.

"The 15th hole, a par 4, drops about 120 feet, and the 17th hole, a par 5, drops about 150 feet," says Carleton. "That's from tee down to fairway and then it climbs back up."

Shadow Mountain recently hired Rob Anderson, the Canadian Professional Golfers Association teacher of the year in 2008, as its general manager and director of golf.

Anderson, who most recently was head professional at The Harvest in Kelowna, didn't fully realize how golf rich the East Kootenays had become until he accepted his new job.

"It's unbelievable," he said. "The last time I ever played golf out here was way back in about 1985 when we had the B.C. Amateur split between Cranbrook and Kimberley. You can start up in Golden and work your way all the way down and it's like 'holy cow, look at all this golf.' It's amazing.

"Coming from the Okanagan, I would have to say the quantity of golf courses is similar, but I think a lot of the courses here are a little bit higher-end. You've got four or five that are high-end in the Okanagan and darn near every one is here."

The Shadow Mountain project includes 600 housing lots, about 200 of which have been pre-sold. Anderson hopes his course, which is located just five minutes from the Canadian Rockies International Airport, can capture its share of the growing golf tourism market in the area.

"Once the housing is fully under way and we have a population of people living here, it will definitely lean more toward member play," Anderson says. "But certainly in the short term, this season and next season at the least, we will be targeting groups from Alberta, Saskatchewan, the B.C. Interior and the Spokane area."

The course's local owners have already established a relationship with the nearby St. Eugene Mission course. Future plans call for cart paths to connect the two facilities.

Peak-season green fees at Shadow Mountain will be $99 on weekdays and $115 on weekends. That fee includes golf, power cart, driving range and all taxes.

Black Mountain, located in the Rutland area on the way to the Big White Ski Resort outside Kelowna, is a mountainside layout that measures about 6,300 yards from the back tees. The par-71 track features six par 3s, seven par 4s and five par 5s.

"It's unique in the fact that most of us are now doing golf courses that are 7,000 yards-plus," Carleton says. "There's rock outcroppings and some tightness to it, so it is the kind of a course that you plot your way around. You won't be using driver on every tee. It's kind of like your old-style country club golf course developed on a small piece of property."

Green fees this year at Black Mountain, which has been developed by Edmonton-based Melcor Developments, will be $58 Monday to Thursday and $64 Friday, weekends and holidays.

Global recession exacts toll on B.C. golf projects

Brad Ziemer | VANCOUVER SUN

The locals weren't surprised. Even before the economy turned, some of them had a nickname for the ultra-scale oceanfront Wyndansea Resort in Ucluelet.

They called it Wait-and-See.

Well, the wait seems to be over. Wyndansea, which was to include a Jack Nicklaus signature golf course, filed for protection from its creditors in January.

But in a mid-February decision, B.C. Supreme Court Justice Bruce Butler ruled that any compromise plan was "doomed to fail" and revoked the creditor protection. The project now figures to be liquidated.

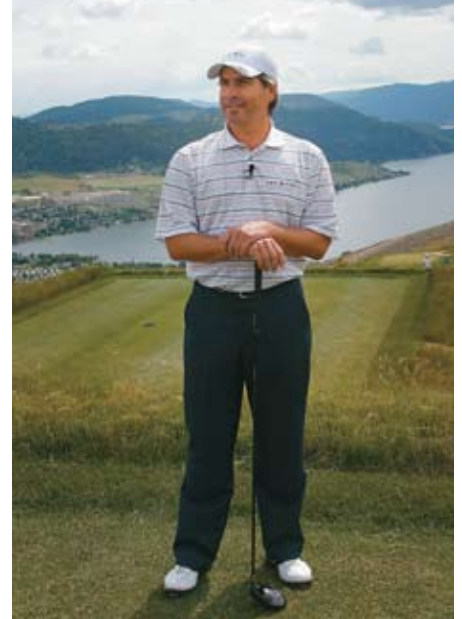

It joins a growing list of B.C. golf course developments tied to real estate that have become victims of the global recession.

The Rise in Vernon got its course open last summer, but also has recently sought creditor protection. Its current Alberta-based owners are trying to sell the project.

At the Revelstoke Mountain Resort, the Nick Faldo-designed course announced for the area last year is now on hold. The Revelstoke resort has recently been taken over by Tom Gaglardi's Northland Properties Corp.

"There's no question there will be a golf course on that property," Gaglardi said recently. "As to what year we get at it ... hopefully sooner rather than later."

The Wildstone project in Cranbrook also has run into money troubles and is seeking capital from new investors. But general manager Shane Dysart says he hopes the first nine holes of the development's golf course will be ready for play in July or August, with all 18 holes possibly opening in September.

The Rise in Vernon has struggled, despite a Fred Couples signature course.

Heath Fletcher / Handout

A new course planned for Fernie seems to be dead, and the Cliffs Over Maple Bay, a Greg Norman design on Vancouver Island, appears to be in jeopardy. In addition to the challenges brought by the credit crunch, the course's owners don't have any water supply for the golf course.

Needless to say, times are tough for golf course architects.

"It's pretty lean right now," says Lower Mainland-based Wayne Carleton of Cooke-Carleton International. "Graham Cooke, who has been doing this a long time, says this is probably the toughest it's been and it might sustain itself for a while ... It will be interesting in the next couple of years to see how many of us are able to survive."

SHE'S ALREADY WON FIVE B.C. WOMEN'S AMATEUR CHAMPIONSHIPS. NOW, SHE'S CHASING SENIOR TITLES — INCLUDING THE BIG ONE IN THE U.S. THAT SLIPPED AWAY LAST YEAR.

BIG GAME

She stands 4-foot-10 and her last name is Little, but forget about the jokes because Jackie Little has heard them all.

"All my life," she says with a laugh.

Well, at least since she fell in love with her golf instructor and married pro Pat Little in Edmonton about 30 years ago. That partnership has produced two grown children and many golf championships for Jackie, who despite her diminutive stature packs a big game.

Little won two Alberta Junior Girls titles and a pair of Alberta Women's Amateur championships before moving to Vernon in the 1980s, when Pat landed the head professional job at Vernon Golf Club. That's when Little began collecting B.C. titles. She's won five B.C. Women's Amateur championships and last year, her first as a senior golfer, she served notice that she has lots of golf left in her. Little won the B.C. Senior Women's title at Spallumcheen Golf Club in Vernon by 12 shots and then later that summer added the Canadian title in St. John's, Nfld.

Her win at the Canadians surprised a few people who weren't familiar with Little, but it's kind of been that way most of her golfing life. "I'm not noticed and just kind of quietly go about my business and the next thing is people are going 'wow,'" she says. "That's kind of how I do it."

Little credits her dad with getting her involved in golf as a kid. Her family were members at Glendale Golf Club in Edmonton and Jackie began joining her father on the links for occasional rounds.

"I had some success early and like any kid if they do well at something right away then it's an instant love," she says. "Golf has been a part of my life forever."

Wanting to keep it fun meant that Little never really gave professional golf a serious thought.

"I just never wanted it to be a job. Especially when you have a family. I took about five or six years off when I had my kids and so never really felt obligated to be out there working hard. If I feel at times I'm tired and I really don't want to do that this year, you don't feel like you have to. I didn't want my love of the game to become a job."

These days, Little's job has been helping Pat run Hollies Golf Course, a nine-hole executive layout in Port Alberni they bought five years ago. "It's hard work, but I think it's been good for my game. In quiet times I just whip out onto the putting green and practise. I have a good husband. I look at him and he says, 'okay, go practise.'"

Despite her size, Little still manages to muscle the ball out there about 220 yards off the tee. But she also leans heavily on an impeccable short game. "I certainly don't have the height for the sport," she says. "I think I'm consistent and I'm strong mentally. I'm able to control emotions and just kind of power along."

Little plans another busy golf schedule this summer. She will defend her B.C. title at Meadow Gardens in Pitt Meadows and her Canadian title in Nova Scotia. She also hopes to take another run at the one championship she really wants on her resume: the U.S. Senior Women's, where she advanced to the round of 16 last year before she was eliminated after letting a two-up lead slip away.

She and Pat, who caddied for her that week, have analysed that match to death. "In all the other matches we had been more aggressive," she says. "If we were 2-up, we'd say, okay, let's make it 3. For some reason, we didn't think that way. We were just coasting and we didn't get in aggressive mode. Next thing you knew we were even and boom."

Anne Newman, a teaching pro at Sunnysdale in Courtenay, has spent the past three years working with Little and has no doubt she'll win that U.S. Senior title.

"She is a dedicated person and probably one of the nicest people you'll ever play golf with," says Newman. "She will win that U.S. title. She will win. We have no issues about that. We just have to get her ready for it."

Surrey steps up to the tee

SPONSORED BY SEVERAL BUSINESSMEN, THE CANADIAN TOUR RETURNS TO HAZELMERE FOR THE SEASON'S MARQUEE EVENT.

Ward Perrin / Vancouver Sun

Winnipeg's Adam Speirs, after winning the Greater Vancouver Charity Classic at Hazelmere last year.

Brad Ziemer | VANCOUVER SUN

The Canadian Tour's annual Lower Mainland stop has a new name and a larger purse this year, but some very familiar fairways.

Hazelmere Golf Club will once again play host to what this year is called the City of Surrey Invitational. It replaces the former Greater Vancouver Charity Classic.

The name change is a reflection of the commitment that several Surrey businessmen made to offer financial sponsorship to the event.

As a result, the tournament's purse is increasing this year to $150,000 from $100,000. The winner of the June 11-14 event will take home $24,000.

Last year, Winnipeg's Adam Speirs earned his first Canadian Tour win at Hazelmere, which will be playing host to the event for the fourth time this year.

The B.C. Amateur Championship, which was won last year at Marine Drive by North Vancouver's Eugene Wong, this year moves to Duncan Meadows on Vancouver Island. The event is scheduled for July 14-17 and Wong, a freshman at the University of Oregon, is expected to be on hand to defend his title.

The B.C. Women's Amateur, won last year by Richmond's Kira Meixner, goes June 30-July 4 at Canoe Creek, the Salmon Arm course designed by former PGA Tour player Dave Barr.

The Canadian Women's Tour makes its annual B.C. visit May 24-26 at Seymour Golf Club in North Vancouver.

The B.C. Junior Boys and Girls Championships will be played in close proximity to one another. The boys tee it up July 7-10 at Pitt Meadows Golf Club, while the girls go July 7-9 at nearby Golden Eagle Golf Club. Eugene Wong and Sue Kim of Langley were last year's winners.

Open season at Shaughnessy

Brad Ziemer | VANCOUVER SUN

The deal's not quite yet done, but expect an official announcement later this spring that Shaughnessy Golf & Country Club will play host to the 2011 RBC Canadian Open.

Scott Simmons, executive director of the Royal Canadian Golf Association, says Shaughnessy is on track to be awarded the event. "We have been pretty public about wanting Shaughnessy to be part of the rotation, so I don't think it will come as a shock to anyone," said Simmons.

Shaughnessy last played host to the event in 2005 and the course was warmly received by the players. Its tight 7,000-yard layout proved to be a tough test as Mark Calcavecchia won the tournament with a 72-hole score of five-under par 275.

"It was voted the best course on tour that year by the players," Simmons said.

The only real disappointment about the 2005 Open at Shaughnessy were the crowds. They were smaller than expected and Simmons, who wasn't with the RCGA at that time, pledged to do a better job of marketing the event in 2011.
